Dear Insiders,

Märklin's new products for 2011 were very warmly welcomed at the International Toy Fair in Nuremberg – above all, our Insider Club models. Not only was the response from the visitors to the fair positive: as you can read in this issue, there are a host of individual details which Insider Club members find attractive about the class 50.40 H0 Club model. We follow up further on this interest, as Märklin's Documentation Section is permitting an exclusive glimpse behind the scenes. A further highlight for Insiders: the unmistakable Lanz agricultural tractor, known to all as "the Bulldog", has been newly produced for you as a replica – naturally in top quality die cast metal. Third focus of our attention is the numerous concessions our Club members can enjoy: five pages long is the list of cooperation partners offering them attractive concessions such as reduced admission – a summary most suitable for the travel season which is just about to start. Quite simply, it's worth while being a Club member. We hope you enjoy reading your Club News.

Fascinated admiration: Intermodellbau Dortmund attracts model railroad fans with the 2011 new releases.

Intermodellbau Dortmund

Vehicles in action, tips and tricks from layout professionals and model railroad experts: Intermodellbau in Dortmund presents from April 13 to 17, 2011 trends in model design and construction – and of course Märklin will be there too, on stand F220, hall 4, with all their current new products.

The layout and module fans will all have value for money: altogether, there will be more than 40 model layouts to admire in the Dortmund Westfalenhalle. The manufacturers will also be offering suggestions and information on their latest products. The lounge area is sure to be a popular meeting place again this year, with the "Lokschuppen" café and the action area with seminars. Opening hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday. The adult entrance fee is 11 euro, young people 14 to 16 years pay 8.50 euro and kids 6 to 13 years 4.50 euro. A family ticket costs 23 Euro. Further info is available by telephone from +49 (0)231 / 12 04 521 and in the Internet (www.intermodellbau.de). Tip on how to get there: on April 16, 2011 a special train hauled by steam locomotive 41 096 with 1960s rolling stock is planned from Salzgitter to Dortmund exhibition grounds.

Club members are entitled to these discounts

There is a reduction of 1.50 euro on the price of a day ticket to Intermodellbau for Insider Club members. Simply present your Club card at one of the day box offices and you pay less. The entrance fee for adults will than be only 9.50 euro, and that for young people 14 to 16 years old, students, trainees / apprentices and disabled persons is reduced to 7 euro.

Special Car for Intermodellbau

Märklin is producing a special car in H0 for the Intermodellbau: it is a reefer car from the Dortmunder Kronen brewery, together with a matching Mercedes-Benz type LP 608 brewery truck – both in authentic livery as they would have appeared in the mid 1960s. This special car is produced as a one-time only series and will only be offered during Intermodellbau at the exhibition and at dealers in the Dortmund area.

The 2011 Club card is here

Dispatch of the new cards for Märklin Insider Club members is carried out with confirmation for the new Club year. New members receive their Club card either together with the invoice when paying either by direct debit or credit card, or with the welcome letter sent out after receipt of payment. The attractive card not only distinguishes you as a real Märklin specialist, it also entitles you to discounts for various events and cooperation partners. Give-away at the International Toy Fair

It is part of the annual tradition that Märklin has a surprise waiting for the trade visitors to the International Toy Fair in Nuremberg: in 2011, Märklin produced as a fair giveaway the legendary rail zepplin in Z gauge (not operational). The prototype is the rail car which ran in the 1930s and was celebrated as a milestone in the history of technology.

With its propeller propulsion and 600 HP airplane motor, the gray rail zepplin set up a rail speed record of 233 km/h (145 mph) on June 21, 1931.

Renaissance for the gray classic: the rail zepplin in 1:220 scale was exclusively for trade visitors to the 2011 International Toy Fair.

Worthy of admiration: experts discuss the finer points of the exclusive freight train steam loco 50 4005 and the dumper car set 1 at their public premiere.

In demand: what Club members think of the 2011 Insider model

"The valve gear is a milestone"

The 2011 Insider loco has had a brilliant response from Club members – the Franco-Crosti loco (FC) with the road number 50 4005 scores with its flamboyant appearance and fine detailing. The two dumper car sets are very much to the taste of the premium customers as well.

Hanno Brüninghaus: dumper cars as an additional attraction to match the class 50.40.

"I saw the Franco-Crosti loco for the first time at the International Model Railway Exhibition in Cologne in the showcase at the Märklin stand – and I was absolutely thrilled", says Ulrich Tschuschner from Wetzlar. The detailing is extremely good, and the side chimney and the tender with the moveable hatch covers are worth seeing. "I'm a great freight train loco fan and that means the class 50.40 is just right – with the two dumper car sets, that'll make a fine assembly".

Stephan Scholz from Taunusstein reacted instantly: "I made a video of the 2011 Insider model straight away for my friends". Oliver Schlauch from Bonn enthuses over the finely-worked and easily-visible preheating boiler – and stresses the freight loco's versatility: "Although the prototype only had a permitted top speed of 80 km/h (50 mph), the loco also hauled passenger trains". Ralph Gautzsch from Bochum assesses 50 4005 as a "flamboyant locomotive, which will not be seen on every layout". Ralph Steger of Linz describes it as a "successful model with its characteristic profile", and ordered it from his dealer the moment the order form arrived.

Franz-Josef Reitz has been hoping for a long time that the "exotic class 50.40" would one day be modeled: Hailing from Geisenheim, he saw the FC locos running between Oberlahnstein and Mainz when he was twelve. Local patriotism also motivates Olaf Hertel of Schwerte: "There are pictures of some of the 50.40s which used to come to the Schwerte repair shops for major overhauls to be carried out". And once, Martin Vieregge met one of the prototype locomotives "here at the junction of east and west in Hamm". What impresses him about the new model is the expressive design of the valve gear ("a milestone"), which persuaded him to order the loco. Its detail has prompted Bernd Stoltze from Brunswick to display it in a cabinet: "The 2011 Insider model looks very good and with its delicate work it is of interest as a collector's piece".

Ulrich Klumpp, from MIST 67, is a fan of steam locos "when you can recognize from far off what power they have to offer – and that is very obvious with the class 50.40". And from a technical point of view too he is delighted to see the new developments in valve gear and propulsion. "It was great to hear that the loco was to be fitted with a bell-shaped armature", explains Klumpp. "That means there is hope for us modular and running model railroaders yet, that in future more new models will be fitted with these motors". Club member Michael Krumm particularly welcomes the idea of an FC model for Insiders. The treasurer of the Federal Association of German Rail Friends points out a design detail important for operations: the class 50.40 model is equipped to fit the smoke generator kit 7226 at the forward smoke stack and not at the side. Reason: for ease of assembly, the side stack is made in two parts, although this cannot be seen. For Hanno Brünninghaus from Round Table MIST 4, the class 50.40 represents "an attractive Insider model, because it maintains the tradition of modeling unusual locomotives as Insider models". Following a number of express passenger train steam locomotives, we once again have a freight locomotive, which in combination with the newly-designed dumper cars makes an additional attraction. "From the model railroader's point of view, the biggest challenge is in the valve gear, considering that Märklin has abandoned the articulated frame for ten-coupled wheels in this model".

Horst Bauer, a Club member since the very start, has one of every Insider model. "And I'm buying the FC loco because it looks so striking", says the guy from Remscheid, who wonders how on earth Märklin manages to find such unusual locomotives.

The finely-detailed design of the class 50.40 makes it clear that Märklin is the master of its trade: "The Catia CAD design system is standard in the automobile industry and makes it easier for the developer to get a perspective view of the object". Cees Molenaar from Rotterdam, an engineer who works for ABB Marine & Cranes, also praises Märklin – and this for their customer orientation: "I suggested the class 50.40 in the Insider survey as the model I would like to see. It is great to realize that Märklin does listen to us Insiders".

Exclusive for Märklin Insiders: Lanz agricultural tractor as replica

Power for the farmer

A classic returns to the Märklin range: green, robust and powerful – there are the unmistakable features of the Lanz agricultural tractor. In 2011, the legendary tractor is again available as a replica – this time, exclusively for Märklin Insiders.

Highlights

- Replica of the Lanz "Bulldogs" in green, manufactured with the original tools of the earlier model item 8029.
- Cardboard packaging in authentic, historic design marked as a replica.
- Complete with tractor driver, exhaust and metal wheels fitted with rubber tires.

They rumble and chug away and they show off their power: for Lanz Bulldog tractors, peace and quiet are words in a foreign language. For this reason, these well-known agricultural machines are enjoying ever-increasing popularity with fans, and have long been regarded by model railroaders as desirable collectors items. Everybody wanted one in 1959 when Märklin first produced the tractor in a limited edition as item 8029. Now there is another chance of getting hold of one: as the last model in a five-part replica series,

Märklin is again producing the "Bulldog" (item 18029), this time exclusively for Insider Club members, in an approximate scale of 1:45. It is based on the so-called "Ackerluftbulldogs" ("country air Bulldogs"), which made a major contribution to improved agricultural yields from the end of the 1930s until the mid-1950s.

The Bulldog had its simplicity and its robustness as well as its reliability to thank for its success.

In 1921 the company Heinrich Lanz of Mannheim shows how good they are at the Leipzig Agricultural Show as the first German undertaking with a prototype of a tractor. Germany's biggest agricultural machinery manufacturer presents their 12 HP crude oil tractor with hot bulb motor to the public. The creator of the "Bulldog", Dr. Fritz Huber, is also impressed by his tractor: "A tractor can't be single-cylindered enough". The first attempt to make life in the fields a little easier is undertaken by the Lanz company between 1910 and 1926 with their "Landbaumotor" (agricultural motor), an unwieldy, inflexible colossus. This is all to change when Lanz introduce their agile Bulldog to the market in 1921. It revolutionizes agriculture when the Bulldog appears. Its name becomes the byword for agricultural tractors, its robustness and economy in operation are proverbial, prompting the company to advertise in rhyme in its product brochures: "Behandle den Bulldog wie Pferd, Ochs und Kuh. Dann sparst du viel Geld und hast deine Ruh!"

The "Bulldog" and its packaging are permanently marked as "replicas".

During the Bulldog era, there were various types with some curious-sounding names, such as "Ackerluftbulldog", "Eilbulldog" and "Verkehrsbulldog".

Its really rather unusual name the tractor owes to its massive appearance with the hot bulb at the front. When it was dark and the "nose" of the tractor glowed brightly, the two holes at the sides of the hot bulb looked just like a pair of glowing red eyes. The Lanz company built the 55 HP D1506 for medium-sized farmsteads. This "Ackerluftbulldog" with its six-speed gearbox was one of the best-selling Lanz tractors of those days and with its rubber tires it was possible to use it both on the farmstead and on the roads. It was operated with gasoline and diesel. Production of the 100,000th. "Ackerluftbulldog" was celebrated in 1942. It was available in a number of different versions – special accessories included a universal wing, a PTO shaft and motorized air pump for the tires. The Märklin replica is based on the D1506 prototype and is fitted with a universal wing and an exhaust. Later on, the Mannheim factory also built half-diesel Bulldogs, which had to be started using gasoline, then when the motor had reached its operating temperature, it was switched over to work on diesel.

By 1953, Lanz had secured an export proportion of 20% and expanded its distribution area into southern Europe. The designers were paying more attention to the health and comfort of the tractor driver, and the appearance became more rounded. Despite all the innovations, the Mannheim factory too was troubled by the economic consequences of the post-war era, and in 1956 the company was taken over by the American tractor manufacturer John Deere & Company. The typical Deere color scheme of green and yellow later became the hallmark of the Lanz badge, and the company was renamed "John Deere-Lanz" in 1960. Today the John Deere factory in Mannheim has a workforce of around 2,700 staff.

Experts forum: the model of the newly-tooled dumper car comes through under the searching eyes of Märklin documentalists (from right) Thomas Landwehr, Dr. Andreas Röntzsch, Bernhard Hümmelchen and (in the foreground) Philipp Zipf.

Documentation: correctness of detail makes Märklin models stand out

Guardians of authenticity

Märklin models impress due to their high-quality design – faithfulness to the original and high-grade materials are the hallmarks of the Göppingen company. Foundations for historically-correct design are laid down by the Documentation Section.

The F-z-51 and F-v-51 dumper cars are both new tooling and they dominate both of the exclusive dumper car sets for Insiders. "The models are not only more delicately modeled, they are much more authentic than their predecessors in the Märklin range" says Thomas Landwehr, drawing the attention to a specific detail: the documentation staff had examined a railroad service instruction in the archive – DS 426/XII "Instructions relating to freight cars, freight car components and load units in multi-modal traffic" of the German Federal Railroad more closely for this project and had in the course of the examination become aware of the track clamps. These components, which were to keep the cars on the rails when the buckets were unloaded, have now been incorporated in the model. "The rail clamps were placed on the rail head and locked – without this safety measure there were accidents because the cars simply toppled over if the load in the buckets was stuck or had become frozen", as Landwehr relates. In the model, the lifted, running, setting of the track clamps is replicated. The documentalist deliberately chose the condition as running at the start of the 1960s: at that time, the track clamp was fitted as standard equipment to new cars, while existing cars were retrofitted with the gear. At this time, the cars were no longer known as Ommi 51 – they were now designated F-z-51 and F-v-51, before the final UIC-compliant designation of F-z 120 was introduced.

When Product Management – often after preparatory work by Documentation – decides on the introduction of a new model, Documentation collates the history of the original and from all Insider model: why in particular 50 4005?

For the 2011 H0 Insider locomotive, it was hard work to restrict the variety of modifications, as Documentation had to take a large number of versions into account before the locomotive was decided on. "On the class 50.40, the type of feed-water heater and the arrangement of the footsteps at the front were changed, and the side chimneys were replaced completely", says Dr. Andreas Rantzsch, giving just a few examples. And as if that were not enough, "there was one 50.40 fitted with oil firing and a totally different tender to match, and from 1967, many of the class 50.40 locos were fitted with a bell. And then several of the locos were used more and more often on passenger trains". The choice fell on a locomotive in the first stage of development, as it was running in 1962: the loco with the road number 50 4005, at that time allocated to Osnabrück depot, shows all features characteristic of the type, and also wears the prominent rounded feed-water heater.

the different variations of the prototype, suggests possible versions for execution in model form. "Our task is then to visualize and assess the material for the following stages of model development", explains Thomas Landwehr. "We are more or less a filter to counter overstimulation, since Product Management and Design do require clear specifications to carry out their work". Every year, there are several hundred files of documentation processed for the new product ranges for Märklin, Trix and LGB, and in a corresponding manner, the projects run parallel with the four documentalists and the specialist assistant. The knowledge is all stored in the archive, and the suspended filing system also has a database. For a prototype there is often a file already to hand, to which new documents are added. In this way, a number of sub-files were created for the dumper cars:

- Photos: from shots of the prototypes, common characteristics and typical features of the cars can be established, as well as variations in the equipment.

Research success: pictures of overturned dumper cars document the desirability of the track clamps – a contemporary procedural instruction clarifies the precise process when the buckets were emptied.

H0 Insider model 2011: the attractive train consist verified the Documentation Section with authentic original photographs.

- Drawings: general arrangement, painting and lettering and design drawings all show the shape, color and lettering on the cars. These are sourced from the constructors and the railroads.
 - Other items: in the miscellaneous file, we find operating instructions, notices, descriptions, exchanges of correspondence and references to articles in books and magazines.
- Apart from this "solid" archive material, there is also material in electronic form, such as for current vehicles, photographs taken by digital camera.

"The ideal situation is when we have design plans and photographs, a prototype still exists and we can track the technical history and the development from our sources", explains Dr. Röntzsch. If one of the factors is missing, we have to start on a problematic jigsaw puzzle – such as we faced with the 2011 Insider steam loco: all 31 machines of the 50.40 class were cut up. What about drawings and photographs? Of limited use: "German manufacturers always used to photograph machines facing left. The model designer cannot do much with a drawing of the inside of a boiler – the plans only give you exact measurements". The outside of a loco was of no interest – this was decided by what fittings there were. The documentalists are always on the alert for drawings which were prepared for advertising purposes: only seldom have the stages of development been added to general arrangement drawings. And esthetics are secondary in photographs of prototypes – rail historian Röntzsch was delighted to find a photograph of a scrap 50.40 partly dismantled: "What interests us is what it looks like under the deck, what is concealed by the smoke deflectors or what a pipe on the boiler does – it wouldn't have been put there without a reason, or just to create an effect". Supposed mistakes on models immediately draw mutterings from the model railroader

Masterpiece: due to its delicate appearance, the dumper car counts as the highlight of the two exclusive 2011 freight car sets for Insiders.

Locomotive expert
Dr. Andreas Röntzsch: "The ideal situation is when, to work out the development history, we have design plans and photographs available and a prototype still exists".

Freight car specialist Thomas Landwehr: "Our task is then to visualize and assess the archive material for the following stages of model development".

scene. "That's how it was with the V 90 switcher locomotive", recalls documentalist Dr. Andreas Röntzsch. "In fact, the critics had completely overlooked the fact that there were two versions of the V 90 which differed in the number of vents in the long engine hood". Documentation files for new products and for their color schemes and lettering of the models are assembled from the collected material. "The design file contains descriptions, drawings and photos in hard copy or as a file", Landwehr says. The color and lettering files describe what color is required for each part of the model and what lettering and plates have to be printed where on the model. They first go to the Product Managers, who then pass on the information in the development order, and that kicks off the development process.

The project is not all over for the documentalists with delivery of the documentation. "True, by then we are already well ahead in researching for other models, but we don't treat the projects as being 'out of sight, out of mind'," as Landwehr assures us. There are not just queries from the designers or questions from Marketing: "We continue to collate and thus to complete our archives".

Pure operating enjoyment

With its roots deep in northern Germany, the Hanseatic Märklin Round Table (HAMST) radiates across the country: the HAMSTers are known to everyone in the branch – after all, they are regarded as pioneers of the Märklinist groups.

What is typical for HAMSTers? "The crank excursion is one example", answers Bernd Michaelsen immediately. "On this special trip with a steam loco through Schleswig-Holstein, one section of the round tablers sits in the train while the others follow with the auto in accordance with the timetable to selected photographic locations". There is no question of "either – or" for the HAMSTers: that would be intolerant. The expression which has in the meantime become established throughout Germany for this type of event expresses Hanseatic self-mockery – a further characteristic, as founder member Alex von Wrangel confirms: "We are a dynamic group without a hard-and-fast organization team, and we have never been deadly serious". Only in one point, according to Michaelsen, is there no compromise: "Whether an operator, module runner, collector or layout builder – whatever makes a person happy, we leave to them, all we ask is that it is Märklin". At the HAMSTer meet this time, the trains running on the layout in the middle of the hotel side room are all original consists verified from northern Germany. Two class 218 diesel locos top and tail a rake of passenger cars – the authenticity is verified by Klaus-Peter Andersen, who is regarded as the final opinion in all model railroad forums when it comes to diesel locos. There are also Danish trains running, a long raft of reefers and the local train from Lübeck to Fehmarn. "Regional authenticity has a high priority for the Travel fans: first tour the HAMST founders set up was in 2001 to Bremen repair shops – the wanderlust remains.

Loco display à la HAMSTER: the Danish NOHAB (right: MV 1134) is at the front.

Authenticity: on the theme evening, only north German train consists run.

Märklin Mega Meeting 2011

The HAMST will be organizing the Märklin Mega Meeting (MMM) 2011 from June 2 to 5 in Hamburg. "Many Märklinists have already said they will be here – and the longest journey will be from Perth, Western Australia", reports Bernd Michaelsen, in charge of organization. "It will be a friendly mega-round table with a superb fringe program". The HAMSTer really have put together a superb program – there are for example special tickets for the Miniatur Wunderland and lectures held there, special trips (AKN-operational depot, DB repair shops, trip on the docks railroad) or guided tours through the Hamburg under-worlds. As of now, participants can order a special model MMM 2011 (V2.023) under www.maerklinstorehamburg.de Bernd Michaelsen (left) supported MIST-1 activist Frank Ronneburg in 2009 at the first MMM – now MIST 1 is standing by the Hanseatics this June.

HAMST, as far as both the landscape and the rolling stock is concerned", asserts co-founder Heinz Lübke. According to Michaelsen, that contributes largely to the sense of identification of the more than 35 members, "apart from the model railroad hobby, visits to other round tables, parties on railroad-oriented tours and visits to the Märklin open days in Göppingen". A classic HAMSTer meet starts with a tasty buffet. After this, information is disseminated to the group and any decisions required are put to the vote. Currently, the 2011 Märklin Mega Meeting (MMM), which is being organized by the HAMSTers in Hamburg, is on the agenda. "As a special model for the MMM, Märklin will be producing the diesel loco V2.023 of the AKN in its 2010 condition in Schleswig-Holstein colors", as Stefan Wirth reports. The HAMSTers give a round of applause – an absolutely appropriate exclusive model. There then follows operation of the HAMST layout, mostly free running, with everyone at liberty to bring his own rolling stock. There are also exchanges of opinions and information, as at the occasional themed evenings, and technical discussions over modifications, collecting and modular construction.

The HAMST is regarded as the first round table on the Märklinist scene (see description). "But the Hanseat accepts no decorations", adds Lübke immediately. "We stand for running pleasure and friendly company, which includes exchanges and meeting with old acquaintances, help with technical problems, layout construction and handicraft". The model railroad hobby is all about common interest, Hanseatic openness harmonizes the wide variety of preferences. "Everyone finds their own niche", assures Michaelsen, and collective intelligence is thus correspondingly extensive: "Our Preferences: H0 and gauge 1 are the gauges favored by the HAMSTers – there are very few Z-gaugers there.

"Crankex": HAMSTer travel in the train, others follow them in autos to photographic spots.

Expertise: apart from running operations, technical discussions develop – specialists of both sexes cover all manner of subjects.

expertise ranges from loco repairs and help with modular construction through digitalization, landscape design and track planning to establishing the value of collections". Help is also extended to non-HAMSTers, although guests have to notify in advance.

"There are guests at each round table meet", as Lübke has observed. "We are after all closely connected with the MIT Nord – we even operate a joint modular layout. MIT Lübeck, MIT Kiel and MIST 1 in Berlin all have standing visitor rights, and we maintain close contacts with all round tables further afield over the Internet". The HAMST catchment area covers from Hamburg to Bremen, all of Schleswig-Holstein and Lower Saxony.

"Generally, every Märklinist feels he is a member of a homogeneous group", explains Alex von Wrangel. "We meet at Long Train Events, Märklin open days or trade fairs – and in June at the MMM." Michaelsen too feels himself part of the group of experts, which means "being part of a group of like-minded people, exchanging experience at a similar level and helping others out". And Märklin – in the models, he values "the metal shapes, the quality, operational safety, reliability and long-lasting qualities – in addition, the locos will negotiate radius 1 curves and are still strikingly realistic". Lübke talks of the collectable and historic brand and adds one emotional dimension: "Youthful memories play an important part too, and there is a particular flair as well: after all, Märklin is Märklin".

Description: Hanseatic Märklinist Round Table

History

September 22, 2000 four members of the Märklin Insider forum met up for a round table. 14 days later, there were seven already and they now brought their model railroad material along – they tested control characteristics of digital decoders on a steep ramp set up temporarily. The name "Hanseatischer Märklinisten-Stammtisch" (HAMST) goes back to Alex von Wrangel: "We wanted to stress that the members came from Hamburg, Bremen and the surrounding area, and that all Märklinists are welcome." Well over 20 Märklin Insider round tables (MIST) have now been established in Germany along the same lines.

Activities

Every third Friday of the month, the HAMSTers meet up in Norderstedt. The HAMST is not a registered association – and organizational tasks are undertaken by the members according to inclination. At least once a year, the club organizes a trip out, and shortly before Christmas, Antje Friedt organizes a "Julklapp" Christmas party. On the homepage www.hamst.de, dates, meets and reports are published about the various trips undertaken, and the "Service" section is a veritable treasure trove for scratch-builders. The forum <http://mitnord.siteboard.de> is operated with round tables from Schleswig-Holstein. Contacts at HAMST are Heinz Lübke (+49 (0) 151/19 16 66 19) and Bernd Michaelsen (info@hamst.de).

Global innovation: "Märklin Mobile Station" app

Pioneer in technology and operating fun

With their Central Station II Märklin has set a marker in model railroad control – and now the pioneer is even extending the concept by a further app: locos and solenoid operated accessories can now be remotely-controlled over the Apple appliances iPhone® and iPod touch®. This means that model railroad control has now pushed forward into a new dimension and guarantees total freedom of movement. The principle is extremely simple: a wireless network router to which the Apple appliances – and thus the Märklin application – make contact is connected to the Central Station II. The price is sensational: the software only costs 4.99 euro. Installation on the iPhone® or iPod touch® is done with the gratis Apple program iTunes® (www.apple.com/de/itunes).
